Donio Farms

Camden County

Hammonton, NJ

Meet the Donios

Dennis Donio is a 3rd generation farmer of Italian immigrants. There were 14 children in the 1st generation of Donio farmers. Although the family started out as railroad workers, they changed their trade and began farming berries at what is now Donio Farms in Hammonton, NJ. Donio Farms has expanded from 20 acres to the 300 acres in production today.

Donio Farms

Donio Farms produces sweet corn, tomatoes, peaches, strawberries, cucumbers, melons and peppers. All of the harvesting at Donio Farms is done by hand. Since Dennis Donio wants to keep customers satisfied and coming back for more, he delivers directly to the store's doors. Donio Farms also has its own retail market called "Pete's Farm Market" located in Elm, NJ.

Why Buy Jersey Fresh?

Donio Farms is a strong believer in encouraging New Jersey stores to buy Jersey Fresh produce. Dennis Donio says that customers should, "embrace New Jersey seasonality, accentuate differences."

"We stand behind our produce, no questions asked."

Those look like bell peppers that Dennis is holding in the picture above - but look again - they are actually a new novel variety of round zucchini squash - tender for eating and ideal for stuffing!
